Welcome

Dear participants,

On behalf of Belfast City Council, I am delighted to welcome you to the Global India Business Meeting, here in our great city.

Over the next few days you will have the opportunity to meet fellow Indian and local business leaders; form new, and rekindle existing business relationships; and both start and continue dialogues to further build on existing links between Belfast and India.

The success of established links between India and Belfast is already evident as organisations including Firstsource, L&T, HCL Technology, Techmahindra and Polaris Software have brought considerable investment, jobs and skills to our shores. And as a city we're determined to build on this success to further cement our place as a location of choice for foreign direct investment.

We're currently investing £150 million into projects such as the introduction of super-fast broadband, building world class conference and exhibition facilities and establishing innovation centres and green economy business parks. Belfast is building for the future and our young, educated and skilled workforce will continue to be the life force pushing the city onwards.

Furthermore, the confident, changing Belfast has become a destination for tourists from around the globe, attracting 7.86 million visitors annually. Visitors are discovering a flourishing cultural scene combined with a unique heritage in a city transformed. A city has emerged where history is all around you; where legacy and tradition live on in our stories; where the sharp humour and vibrant creativity of people bring the city to life. It has become a gateway through which visitors go on to experience the fantastic hospitality that we have to offer.

Belfast City Council has worked closely with Horasis and Invest Northern Ireland to develop what I hope you will find to be an informative, relevant and engaging itinerary. I hope you enjoy your time here while attending the 2013 Global India Business Meeting.

Co-hosts of the Global India Business Meeting

The city of Belfast will always be known as the city that built Titanic and while over 100 years may have passed since Titanic set sail, the innovation, dedication and industry that built her still thrives in Belfast today.

Belfast is looking to the future, currently investing £150 million to capitalise on our growing reputation as a city of choice for foreign direct investment and creative industries with a young population and skilled workforce; a leading venue for world-class events and a top cultural and tourism destination.

As the capital city of Northern Ireland, Belfast has a population of 280,962. 34% of our population are under 24 years of age, and 64% percent are of working age (between 16 and 65).

Having attracted 110 foreign direct investment projects between 2006 and 2011, the city is home to two thirds of Northern Ireland's top 50 companies and half of all foreign owned businesses.

Belfast is a connected city. With two airports and a port as well as rail links to Dublin and an excellent road network, the city is well placed to do business throughout the island of Ireland, the United Kingdom and beyond. And digitally, Belfast is investing in world-class connectivity offering ultrafast and wireless broadband by 2015.

The commitment of the city leaders and the investment they have secured is evident. Belfast is open for business; Belfast is ready for the future.
